From the prompt above, the following profiles were generated:

- Deepseek-r1 (user rating: 4.0.): The user has a strong preference for electronic music, particularly in genres like nu-disco, synthpop, and EDM, supported by notable tracks such as "Mood" and "Feel So Close." They also enjoy pop music with elements of Latin influence, as seen in works by Shakira and others. Additionally, their tastes include rap and rock, showcasing a diverse yet cohesive musical style that blends electronic, pop, and Latin flavors.

- Gemini-2.0-flash (user rating: 7.0.): This user enjoys a diverse mix of music, with a strong preference for electronic music, particularly nu-disco and synthpop from the United Kingdom. They also have a significant interest in Latin music, including Latin pop, reggaeton, and Latin hip hop from various Latin American countries and Puerto Rico, alongside some mainstream pop and occasional soul and rock influences. They also seem to use music for relaxation or background ambiance, as indicated by tracks explicitly intended for sleep or relaxation.

- Llama3.2:3b (user rating: 4.0.): This user's musical taste leans towards a blend of electronic and pop elements, with a strong appreciation for global influences, particularly from Latin America and the Caribbean. They seem to enjoy upbeat and energetic tracks, often incorporating tropical rhythms and melodies, as evidenced by their fondness for artists like Bad Bunny, Shakira, and Daddy Yankee. There's also a noticeable interest in calming and atmospheric soundscapes, such as the instrumental cover of "Feel So Close" and the ambient piece "Dog Music". This user appears to have a diverse musical palette, but their overall taste tends towards lively and danceable tracks with Latin flair.

C User feedback

Some users left us feedback on their profiles, here we list the more informative ones. Users were overall happy with their profiles, some complained about hallucinations, others about missing parts of their tastes due to the sampled period.

> "The AI definitions can be long and repetitive at times but the exercise is interesting."

> "Some artists were picked as an example of a subgenre I'm supposed to listen to, but sometimes the artist was misplaced (for example: Whomadewho has a rock band instead of electronic), leading to a wrong description of my music tastes."

> "I would love to compare what I declared against what I actually do. But in general, loved being part of it!!! Made me reflect a lot on how I value things I listen in a more lean in way."

> "Nice work, there were some options that were totally relevant. The ones that I preferred were those with the name of artists I listened too. Some descriptions were including the country origin of artists and it seemed like a hit or miss for me. As I don't know the origin of all artists I listen too, there were some descriptions where I wasn't sure if they were adequate."

"Seems to be missing quite a big part of my taste in music so I'm wondering if the period used for this test is sufficient (I listen to a lot of Reggae usually and it hasn't surface at all in the description - but if the sample used for test is too short, it might not include reggae indeed)."

"Many of the profiles presented hallucinations with track names that don't exist or were misattributed to the wrong artist or music genre. The longer and more detailed the description tried to be, the more these hallucinations appeared."

"20% of times, you seems to have picked an outliers genres, that I don't care about at all, but that matches one specific track or artist that I streamed a lot to. Like track "4 Kampé" (Zouk Love) or artist "Daft Punk" (Electro). Also, very sad to not see genre that I actually love (Carioca Funk, Afro Beat) but don't stream very often. Mainly because I don't know how to find good tracks for these genres. It was a fun ride nonetheless. Thank you!"
